WAS NOT THE MAN.

DESPERADO TURNS OUT TO BE A FARMER

The Supposed Murderer of Sheriff Harris Stops Over Night at Anderson's Hotel.

There was quite a time up at Nate Anderson's hotel last Wednesday night, on which occasion our local officers of the law, assisted by obliging citizens, made a raid on the place with the intention of arresting a man who was supposed to be the murderer of Sheriff Harris, but who turned out to be a farmer by the name of Peter Hanson, who resides in the vicinity of Kaukauna.

Mr. Hanson arrived in the city on the late train and engaged a room at Anderson's hotel, and as he had had a hard day's travel he went early to bed, and was soon sleeping the sleep of the just. It was not intended, however, that he should pass his first night in Grand Rapids without being given a reception that would make him feel at home. The officers of the law, who had been informed of the supposed murder of Sheriff Harris, had been looking for him for some time, and when they arrived at the hotel they found him in bed. They went to the door and knocked, but no answer came. They then went to the window and looked in, and saw him sleeping peacefully. They then went to the door and knocked again, but no answer came. They then went to the window and looked in, and saw him sleeping peacefully. They then went to the door and knocked again, but no answer came. They then went to the window and looked in, and saw him sleeping peacefully.

supposed man would look at the door of the car and then at the ex-deputy sheriff, just as if he were contemplating making a bolt for it. As time wore on it would probably be hard to tell which was the more nervous of the two men, the suspected murderer or the ex-deputy sheriff, as the latter realized that if it was Harris' murderer he was shadowing that he was a desperate man, and that at any moment he might pull out a gun and bore a hole thru him as big as a twenty inch water main.

He stuck to his job, however, and when Grand Rapids was reached the suspect got off the train and going to Anderson's hotel, asked for a room and went to bed. It was time for the detective man to act.

He woke up Sheriff Elbe and told that gentleman the facts in the case, and the latter realized the gravity of the situation and hurriedly summoning those of our citizens who were awake, and gathering all the spare firearms that could be obtained, a silent and stealthy advance was made on Anderson's hotel. The hostelry was surrounded with a double line of what under ordinary circumstances are reputable citizens, but who on this occasion resembled members of a Jesse James gang. It was expected that the murderer would not stay all night, but that he would simply go to his room for a bluff, and after the inmates of the house had gone to sleep, he would get up and make himself scarce.

After the house had been surrounded so that there was no earthly chance of escape, the sheriff went in and woke up Mr. Anderson, who had slept peacefully thru it all and did not know that a desperate criminal was sleeping only a few doors from him. Mr. Anderson says that when he got into the hall he thought it was a sure enough holdup, for the corridor was full of desperate looking characters, and each one carried at least one gun. He was ready to surrender on the spot, but it was explained to him what the mission of the visitors was, and as he glanced from the window he could see at least two hundred more men, all armed with dangerous looking shooting irons, and apparently ready to nail the first human being who showed an eyebrow outside the building.

About this time it became apparent to the man hunters that it would be necessary to wake the desperado up and ask him for his card so that he could be identified, if anything definite was going to be accomplished, and some discussion arose among those present as to who should have the honor of waking him. The sheriff, as representative of the people, and an officer of law and order, thought it was his right, but Charlie Norton, who is a veteran of the Spanish American war and carried a double barreled shotgun, was at last selected to the honor.

Charlie had to argue with the officers of the law for some three hours before they would let him go up and wake the desperado, as they were sure that he was the man who had shot Harris, and it was the expectation of all that as soon as he discovered who was after him there would be something doing in the shooting line. At last Charlie was allowed to go, and when he rapped on the door the man inside woke up and wanted to know if it was train time. Being assured that it was, he got up, turned on the gas, and while everybody was momentarily expecting to see him pop out of the door with a revolver in each hand, the light suddenly disappeared and the desperado was heard clumping back into bed. Then Charlie banged on the door again and told the man to come out in the name of the law. Then the man wanted to know who it was that wanted him, and Charlie told him it was the sheriff of Wood county. "Well, what's your name?" asked the man. This question rather flustered Charlie, for he was not acquainted with the sheriff, and his name had slipped his mind. The name was conveyed to him, however, by some of the rear guard, and then the man wanted to know if he was alone. Getting no satisfaction on this score, he at last decided to come out, and as he issued from the door he found himself looking Charlie's double barreled shotgun square in the eye. He did not seem particularly surprised, however, and after he had rubbed the sleep from his eyes and sworn several large dark blue oaths that would not look well in a great moral and religious paper like the Tribune, he assured the sheriff and his posse that they were barking up the wrong tree. He told them that he had not killed a sheriff for some time, but that he might do so in short order if his uninvited guests did not depart at once and let him go to sleep.

Mr. Hanson told them that he was a farmer, and that he lived near Kaukauna, and he produced letters from his wife, and other documents that substantiated his claims. His explanation was accepted by those present and after being warned not to let it happen again he was left to his slumbers. As the crowd reached the hall again on its way down stairs, there was a thunderous report, and each individual member of the posse came to attention in double quick time and presented arms without any order from the captain. Those outside heard the report and each man cocked his rifle and got behind some friendly obstruction, prepared to die like a man and a soldier.

When the smoke had cleared away it was discovered that the trouble had been caused by the accidental discharge of Charlie Norton's shotgun, who, thinking that the worst was over, had attempted to lower the hammers of the posse, when one of them slipped and exploded the charge. The shot went thru an adjoining partition and passed over the body of a man who had slept peacefully thru the entire row, but who coincidentally to awake when the plaster, pieces of lath and shingle nails struck him in the face. He also made use of some choice bits of slang when he found what the row was all about, but realizing the majesty of the law, he stuffed a pillow into the hole in the wall and went to bed without further objections.

It was now daylight, and it was considered by those present that if they were going to do much in the sleeping line it would be necessary for them to hurry home at once, which they did. Mr. Anderson says he is always willing to aid the law in any way he can, but he also claims that there are difficulties in running a hotel and keeping up the reputation of a quiet and homelike place, under the circumstances that developed at his place last Thursday morning.

It might be said in conclusion that it cost Charlie $4.50 to re-paper the hall where it had been marred by the load of buckshot from his shotgun, which goes to show what a cold, unfeeling world we live in, and how little the general public appreciates our valorous deeds. Charlie says they can catch their own desperados hereafter, unless the sheriff will promise in advance to go good for any damage that may result at the time.

TWENTY TWO TEACHERS FINISH COURSE.

Wood County Training School Finishes First Year in a Very Satisfactory Manner.

The exercises at the Wood County Teacher's Training School on Thursday and Friday afternoon and Friday evening were well attended, and the efforts put forth by the graduates to entertain the visitors were rewarded with the utmost success.

The class day exercises occurred at the training school rooms on Thursday afternoon commencing at 2:30 o'clock, and notwithstanding the fact that these exercises came at a time when there is little chance for the public to attend, there was a good audience present and all enjoyed the papers prepared by the students.

The class day exercises consisted of music, President's address by Eva Jones, Class Song, Class History by Elizabeth McCandless, Inauguration by Benjamin O'Brien, Class Choruses by Bertha Akoy, Music, Birds Common to this Locality by Maud E. Burroughs, Value of Trees by Emily Mank, Pictures Adapted to Ungraded Schools by Anna Bamberg, Music, Class Prophecy by Ida Halverson, Japanese Women in War by Anna Erickson, Class Memorials by Helen Recker, Music.

The class program given on Friday afternoon at the training school rooms was also well attended and there were some very good papers presented by the scholars, which were interspersed with music. The papers were as follows: Training School of Wisconsin by Jennie L. Baugh, Ventilation of School Houses by Florence Hall, Teaching the Philippine by Lucy Clonist, How Presidents are Elected by Gertrude LaVigne, the Hawaiian Islands by Josie Johnson, Geographical Influences upon American History by Mayne Christian, Growth of Wood County by Martha Mews, The Panama Canal by Myrtle L. Sharkey, School Virtues by Ida A. Potter, School Room Decoration by Kathleen McKenney, Ideal Country School House by Fern Miller, and Jean Mitchell; How it applies to School Management by Maudie Smith.

The Commencement exercises were held in the Assembly room of the Lincoln High School on Friday evening, and a large crowd gathered that evening to hear the exercises and also the address to be given by Pres. Chas. McKenney. The program this evening consisted of a vespers hymn by the Training School chorists, invocation by the Rev. Peterson, Vocal Solo, Badonin Love Song by Miss Reeves, piano Solo by Miss Gilkey, Vocal Duet by Miss Reeves and Mr. Rozelle, Address, School and Life by Pres. Chas. McKenney, Music, and the presentation of diplomas by E. P. Arpin. Those in the graduating class this year are Bertha Akoy, Martha Mews, Maud E. Burroughs, Fern Miller, Anna M. Bamberg, Lucy A. Clonist, Mayne Christian, Anna Erickson, Ida M. Halverson, Florence Hall, Josie Johnson, Eva M. Jones, Gertrude M. LaVigne, Emily Mank, Elizabeth McCandless, Kathleen M. McKenney, Benjamin O'Brien, Ada Potter, Jennie L. Baugh, Helen E. A. Recker, Maudie N. Smith, Myrtle L. Sharkey.

The graduating of a class of twenty-two members is certainly an unusual proceeding for the first year's work of a county training school, and is an evidence that the school was not only appreciated by the people of the county, but an actual necessity. During a recent interview with Prof. Jackson, who has charge of the school, that gentleman stated that there was some excellent material in the school for teachers, and that if future years saw as good an attendance as has been the case during the past year, the county schools of Wood County should show a great improvement as the consequence. The attendance the past year was about 42, and there were several applications that could not be accepted owing to the fact that this number of pupils was all that could be accommodated and properly taught by the teaching force. The indications are that there will be an equal number next year who will desire to take the course.

Bound Over to Circuit Court.
Sam Orling was before Justice Cooper last week, having been arrested at Rudolph on a charge of having stolen a bicycle at Fred Orling's place in the town of Rudolph. After hearing the testimony in the case Justice Cooper bound him over to the circuit court.

Orling had been in the city before, on which occasion he had been accelerated in his leave taking by Chief of Police Gibson and his men.

When brought before the court, Orling told quite a lengthy story about his being the descendant of rich and respectable parents who resided in the state of North Carolina, and that while he was on the road he had received a letter from his father which stated that the old man had removed to Wisconsin. As he was wandering along the railroad track toward Rudolph he spied a house that answered the description of his father's place in every respect, as it had been described in the letter, as he thought he would stop in and make the old man a call.

Imagine his disappointment when he discovered that there was nobody at home. There he had been out on the road for five long years, dodging city marshals, drinking beer from a tomato can, and doing other things, calculated to cause grief to any father, and just as he had found the place where his father lived, it was only to discover that the family had gone away and left the house alone.

He said he played with the dog for awhile, and then happening into the woodshed he saw a bicycle standing there, and being a great admirer of the wheel and also of the headlight, he decided that he would take the bicycle and ride it up and down the road for a while, and thus while away the time until his rich and respectable father returned.

This is where he made a mistake. He had hardly got onto the road when he was discovered by some of the children of the household who headed him off and caused him to drop the wheel and continue without it.

When he was arrested at Rudolph there was found in his pockets a miscellaneous assortment of articles, nearly all of which were recognized by the Orling family as being a part of their possessions. In this outfit were a number of attachments for a sewing machine, a bar of soap, a new driver, some curtain hangers, and various other small trinkets of very little value. Orling admitted stealing the small stuff but denied that it was his intention to take the wheel. During his description of his real life he bore down very strongly on the fact that his father was rich and respectable, and also that he had had the best of bringing up, his father having operated an illicit whiskey still in the mountains.

He resented very strongly being called a tramp, but notwithstanding his explanations, he was bound over to the circuit court to await trial.

Will Fix Water Main.
Engineer Pfeiffer has located the break in the water main that crosses the river and he reports that it can be repaired without the services of a diver.

It is the intention to build a cofferdam and around the broken place, and after removing the water, take out the section that contains the hole and put in another. If the water remains low this can be done without a great deal of trouble.

Unclaimed Letters.
Gentlemen, M. W. Books, P. H. Crawford, Hermann Dehnsch, Joseph Engstrom 3, Al Flower, Rev. Ezra D. Long, Ramond Langston, C. L. Miller, S. E. Murray, Alfons Ruzmar, Nick Weismat, Jon Williams, Geo. Wright, Amel Young.

Ladies, Miss Beoda Gaylard, Miss Mary Mullon, Miss Mary Nicholas, Miss Laura Nugent, Mrs. John Shultz, Mrs. Emma Weismat, Mrs. Myrtle Whitney.

Startling Evidence.
Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption coughs and colds to be unequalled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentonville, Va., serves as a capital example. He writes, "I had Bronchitis for three years and lost all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all lung and throat troubles, consumption, pneumonia and grip. Guaranteed by Daily Drug & Jewelry Co. Trial bottles free, regular sizes one and $1.00.

A Delicate Subject.

Rev. I. H. Hicks, the long range weather predictor and publisher of Word and Works, has been fit to get red angry at Willis Moore, who is at the head of the United States weather bureau. By the methods used by Hicks, he is able to tell the weather one hundred years from tomorrow with as much accuracy as he is to tell what tomorrow's weather will be. In fact as a long range, close shooting, always loaded predictor, he has got them all skinned. Now the United States weather bureau has considerable trouble in successfully forecasting even one day ahead, but there is no doubt but what their efforts are honest and unless the weather changes its mind pretty suddenly, as it will at times, they can do pretty fairly for at least twenty four hours ahead. Of course it is pretty tough to work conscientiously over the weather nuts and a lot of trying to develop something in the shape of a forecast, and then when it is all over and just as the government men have looked back in their chairs, drawn a long breath and got their pipes lighted and a satisfied feeling begins to prevail their being, to have an astronomer prognosticator like Hicks rush in and scorch, "I told you so" and show where he had predicted just such a storm of weather along back some time before the world's fair. Yes, this must be very aggravating. As a consequence the government men have seen fit to criticize Hicks and his methods and Hicks has seen fit to criticize the government forecasters. Hicks says the government forecasters are the laughing stock of the children in the town where he lives. But there is no need of their feeling sure at each other just because they are in the same business. It is a good graft for each of them and if they do not go to giving each other away, like the two factions of the republican party in Wisconsin, we may continue to believe in both of them.

Lost a Hand.

John Witezinski had one of his hands pinched while at work in the paper mill at Nokoson some time ago and as the wound refused to heal it was found necessary to amputate the member. Chingone had not in and the hand presented a horrible sight before it was cut off. The operation was performed at Dr. Rockwell's hospital.

Could not Turn Her Head.

You could not find a worse case of rheumatism in a month's journey as the one recently cured by Gloria Tonic, the victim being Mrs. J. Evans, of the Rapids, Mich. She writes: "I could not turn my head, nor dress and undress myself, but twelve boxes of 'Gloria Tonic' completely cured me." John E. Daly.

ATTRACTIONS FOR THE 4TH.

Road Race Promises to be One of the Attractions of the Day.

George Krieger, who is to give the road race on the Fourth of July, informs us that he has secured a number of prizes for the event and as a large number have signified their intention of going into the race it is probable that it will prove quite an event. The following have been secured up to date:

First prize—A Rambler wheel valued at $50 given by the Pope Manufacturing Co.

Second prize—Winchester Repeating Rifle, given by George F. Krieger and Co.

Third prize—Bicycle suit and shoes, by Kruger and Warner.

Fourth prize—Bicycle suit, by Johnson and Hill Co.

Fifth prize—Handsome gold fork given by Bruzzen-Hammon Jewelry Co.

Sixth prize—Smart pin by Hugh Corbett.

Seventh prize—Sweater by Stafford Cole and Co.

Eighth prize—Order for a hat, value $2.50 by Cohen Brothers.

This race will probably start at the corner near Gross and Lyons store and after going over a ten mile course will end at the same place.

The committee having the amusements in charge have secured the services of Prof. Leon, who will make a high dive from the bridge into the river. Two dives will be made during the day, one in the afternoon and one in the evening. A ladder will be erected from the walk way to a height of 75 feet and the dive will be made from the top of this. Prof. Leon was recently with the Ringling Bros. Circus where he gained renown in this feat.

Is it Fair?

The statutes of the State of Wisconsin in section No. 455 provide for the protection of the Christian citizens within her borders, who desire to keep Sunday as a holy rest day as follows:

"Any person who shall open his shop, warehouse or workshop, or shall do any manner of labor, business or work, except only works of necessity and charity, or be present at any dancing or public diversion, show or entertainment or take part in any sport, game or play on the first day of the week shall be punished by fine not exceeding $10 and each day shall be understood to include the time between the midnight preceding and the midnight following the said day, and no civil process shall be served or executed on said day."

In the face of this guarantee, is it fair for any company of citizens, to leave their homes on Sunday afternoon and congregate in another neighborhood of the city, at a ball game or other sport, and disturb the peace and comfort of residents there, in the enjoyment of said right guaranteed them by law?

Is it fair for the city authorities, who are under oath to secure to the citizens these rights guaranteed by the laws of the state, to send officers of the law to defend and enforce the violation of this law rather than to enforce it?

Is it fair for the city to rent, lease, or give the use of public property to an association of any kind, who are going to use it in violation of law and infringement of the rights of others? What do the law abiding citizens of Grand Rapids say?

On Tuesday evening quite an accident occurred at Pittsville in which several members of Rev. E. R. Kildow's family were quite seriously injured. The Rev. gentleman had gone to Babcock to meet his family who had been away and when on their return home their team became frightened at an automobile that stood beside the road near Dr. Wood's place and the result was that the seven occupants of the rig were thrown to the ground and several of them seriously injured. The rig contained seven persons they being Mr. and Mrs. Kildow, Mrs. Kildow's mother and the four children of the family. Mrs. Kildow and her mother were quite seriously hurt, being injured internally, and one of the boys of the family had a leg and an arm broken, and another had a leg broken. The seriousness of the accident was aggravated by one line breaking, which started the team into an adjacent ditch. Mr. Kildow is the pastor of the Methodist church.

Cough, Cough, Cough.

If your doctor tells you that your cough is the forerunner of consumption try Gloria Lung Balm. Best for children. John E. Daly.

Russel Sage says that this vacation idea is all rot. That no man should ever take a vacation. He says it would be as sensible for an employer to ask his help to work two weeks without pay as it is for the help to loaf two weeks at the expense of his employer. Sage may be right. The old boy has been pepping away now for about sixty years and according to all accounts, has by strict economy and criminal penuriousness managed to accumulate quite a bunch of money, some fifteen or twenty millions. He is in the eighties now, and he says that he has never taken a vacation during all the time that he has been at work. It is easy to believe him. Any man who manages to lay away twenty millions of dollars for a rainy day, (Russel must have been expecting a flood), must of necessity put in some pretty steady Hicks and not missed many opportunities to hustle. Still if one figures out what a man could honestly earn in a life time and then subtracts it from the amount that Mr. Sage has accumulated, there will be found to be quite a discrepancy. Where did the extra money come from. Money will not produce itself. This man started in with nothing and ends with twenty millions. Every dollar there represents so much work by man, a laboring man. In order to accumulate something more than nineteen millions of dollars more than he could honestly earn, there must have been some working man who was donating his time to Mr. Sage's account pretty much all the time during these sixty years. And yet he said that it would be foolish to ask a working man to put in two weeks without receiving any compensation for it. If not foolish, it certainly would have been rather cheeky for Mr. Sage to have done so.

During a talk with one of our local ministers of the gospel recently he stated that he had heard it said by a man who was supposed to know something about such matters that all a man had to live for was to work and attend to his spiritual welfare. He said he had been thinking about the matter considerably and that he had about come to the conclusion that there was considerable truth in the remark. Now we do not care to take up the discussion with a minister, as he may have inside information that we know nothing about. Still we cannot call to mind, right on the spur of the moment, an instance where a preacher refused to take a three months vacation where the same was offered him at full pay. Still there may have been cases that we did not hear of.

W. H. Fitch, the sage of Cranston, says that man has three things to live for: namely, fame, fortune and fun. It is his opinion that the same of happiness is reached when man has those three items about equally divided, and does not have any one to excess. There is no question but what men who have been mommies on any subject, whether it be the pursuit of happiness, riches, or fame, have plenty of arguments to support them in their desires, and it is also undoubtedly true that there are plenty of arguments against their method of living.

One man's capacity differs very materially from another's, and it is probable that if a man follows the dictates of his conscience, he is doing as near right as it is possible for him to do, even tho his actions do not coincide with what the rest of mankind considers right.
